In this game, you play as Saki Yukizome who goes on a quest to find her true love- the hero Seito. The hero who she saved a few years ago is back again and he is looking for her! But she doesn't know that they are not exactly the same "love" they once were- from before she "died". You will meet various characters and battle with them, and as you fight, special girls will appear from other screens and ask you for help. But- don't let your guard down or you'll find yourself getting into all sorts of trouble. A lovey-dovey story awaits you in the Oneechanbara series! Saki's Ordinary School Uniform In this game, you play as Saki Yukizome who goes on a quest to find her true love- the hero Seito. The hero who she saved a few years ago is back again and he is looking for her! But she doesn't know that they are not exactly the same "love" they once were- from before she "died". You will meet various characters and battle with them, and as you fight, special girls will appear from other screens and ask you for help. But- don't let your guard down or you'll find yourself getting into all sorts of trouble. A lovey-dovey story awaits you in the Oneechanbara series! You can also use the Costume Change function with the Saki uniform. Story Many years ago... Saki Yukizome (さき ゆきぞめ) was born on the mare of the mighty Onii Clan! She was the only daughter of the Onii Chief, and was deeply loved by her father. But due to some unknown circumstances, her father died one day. This one day, Saki's life was changed... One morning when Saki went to the Onii Clan, the monster lion of the Onii Clan, aka "Ojousama", suddenly appeared before her. Ojousama was an immensely powerful monster that had terrified every household in Onii-Nomisawa! But little did Saki know that it was actually her old friend, the hero Seito, who had come back! He was suddenly before Saki, and teary-eyed, he asked her to stay in the Onii Clan. When he heard what a

Piezotronics Piezotronics is a novel class of piezoelectric transducers operating at infrasound frequencies. It operates with a piezoelectric crystal layered with a thin piezoelectric membrane that is forced against a deformable surface. Piezotronics are characterized by being capable of amplifying the ultrasonic waves that they produce in waveforms similar to the human ear. They may have applications in infrasound sources, ultrasonic hearing and sonar, imaging and medical ultrasonic diagnostics. Operation Piezoelectric materials are relatively inexpensive and their atomic structures, electronic structures, piezoelectric properties and mechanical properties have been experimentally shown to be very similar to those of semiconductor materials such as silicon, gallium arsenide and others. When a piezoelectric material is mechanically compressed, it generates an electric voltage or current in accordance with the piezoelectric effect. An applied voltage will deform the piezoelectric material, changing its volume, and thereby may generate an acoustic wave having a frequency similar to that of the applied voltage. In piezotronic transducers the piezoelectric membrane is shaped in such a manner as to force the piezoelectric upon a deformable surface with a maximum force when no voltage is applied. Advantages of piezotronics Piezotronics are expected to be able to amplify piezoelectric acoustic waves in the range of ultrasound in the kilohertz to megahertz frequency range. They can operate at lower voltages than the most common traditional ultrasonic systems. They may provide enhanced resolution, enhanced voltage sensitivity, increased spatial bandwidth, higher frequency operation and may significantly reduce insertion loss. Piezotronics are expected to be able to operate at lower voltages and produce lower input voltages than piezoelectric transducers which make use of the piezoelectric effect to generate an acoustic wave. This allows them to be used inside living bodies at lower voltages than used in normal ultrasonic transducers

Known to be the “ultimate space simulator” and “a must-buy for every sci-fi fan”, NEO Scavenger comes with two concurrent user modes and a complete tutorial so that people without any knowledge of the genre will be comfortable. The premise of the game revolves around four different races. The player can choose between a human race, a green race called the Rigelians, a red race and an alien race called the Mokush. Each race is able to breathe and survive in space and must travel from an overpopulated Earth planet to different planets to make use of the resources on them. The goal of this project is to find new planets for the different races. The game is an open world game that allows the player to travel as far as 30 light years from the planets and find many different systems. To do so, they can use the available ships that are randomly generated from the game’s design. The use of various type of ships is very important for the progression of the game. The ships are required to travel in different systems and be able to withstand all kinds of dangers. There are a total of 38 types of ships that will help the player do their job and not make the game too much easier. The problem with finding new habitable planets is that they are not plentiful and especially the good ones can be hard to find. The user will have to make a lot of mistakes in order to find them. During the journey the player’s character can be damaged and killed if it is attacked while exploring new areas. To help the player deal with their character’s death the game features an AI engine that will allow the player to create replicas of themselves. These replicas will be in different environments that will be safe for the character, they will be in a captain ship and will possess extra combat powers and abilities. The goal of the game is to travel the galaxy and collect items for research in the science stations that will help them discover new planets and become the first one to discover a new one. The game features two user modes that are unlocked at the beginning of the game: the free mode and the premium mode. They allow the player to create replicas of themselves and there is no penalty in terms of usage if they have to create more replicas in order to proceed the game. From the NY Times: "The premise is simple: Your task in a card game in a restaurant is to play questions about the customers and to propose answers to trivia questions. Eventually, the questions get harder as you go deeper into the rounds." Game of the year game review: The game has a quick pitch: "You know what these people really like, so what will they eat?" You answer, and then six other people get to see the results. You add a "zinger" - a question that the others will have to guess, then the next. It should be no surprise that we spend more time connected to the Internet than not. The number of data transmissions a year in the U.S. is up around 50 billion. And by the end of this year, it'll be over 84 billion. The hard drives in your computers, your smartphone, the routers and modems—all of these boxes are filled with data. With all of this media stored and shared, it's no wonder that when your phone rings, the questions start streaming in: Who is it? What do they want? And do they really need to talk for that long in the first place? And in the meantime, there's still the average of nearly 5,000 email messages a day 49% of the global population has access to some kind of Web-connected device. By 2020, 93% of people will be online. The global growth rate of netbooks was 1,000 percent between 2003 and 2005. The number of mobile Internet

A split fuel rail system typically includes the use of a common fuel supply rail at an engine head to which fuel is supplied from an enrichment system and a plurality of individual fuel injectors, each of which is individually supplied fuel from a separate pre-charged fuel rail. Such a system may be used in a diesel engine, spark-ignition engine or in a two-cycle engine. In the case of the dual fuel (diesel/ketone) system, the separate supply rails are typically driven by a common solenoid valve. In a low pressure, high volume injector common rail system, fuel pulses are naturally provided to each injector by a solenoid valve. In a high pressure, small volume injection system, fuel is sprayed out of the inject
