But I really don't want to use the DB-API module. Also I have no idea why the fetchall returns a list with tuples. This is how I connect to my database db = MySQLdb.connect(host = 'localhost', user = 'root', passwd = '', db = 'test') Then cursor = db.cursor() And then cursor.execute("SELECT * FROM tabelle") returns a list with tuple in each row: (('1',),('2',),('3',),('4',)) So I don't know how to fetch the data from my mysql db. A: I think cursor.fetchall() returns a list. You can use this to iterate through the list to access the tuples as separate variables. Fetching all the rows from the database, i.e. querying the database for all the rows in the table is achieved using the cursor.fetchall() method, which will return a list of tuples, where each tuple contains the result from each executed query. It is good practice to use cursor.fetchall() when you don't need rows that are returned for every query, because the overhead of setting up a connection and iterating through all the data in a table is incredibly slow for large tables with large columns. A larger version of the code would be: cursor = db.cursor() sql = "SELECT id, data_type, value 0cc13bf012

He also announced his decision to pull the United States out of the Paris climate agreement. It wasn't just the US that was to blame for the breakdown in diplomatic relations. The Russian foreign ministry said Thursday that the United States was responsible for "further provocations" and being "hostile to Russia." But now there's a new tension — between the United States and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), the nuclear-armed neighbor. The US has accused the DPRK of being behind the recent hack of Sony Pictures. Just because Trump has backed out of the climate deal doesn't mean that he's committed an act of war. That designation is reserved for the President, not a single country. And while it doesn't seem like Trump has yet completely cut the cord with Russia, there are some signs that the president and the country are trying to put everything behind them. Here are the five takeaways: 1. Trump brings back sanctions on Russia In January, Trump ordered the sanctions be lifted on Russia, but a month later he decided to "claw back" those sanctions and put them back into place. The sanctions were first imposed by President Obama last year in response to the Russian hacking of the US election in an attempt to help Trump win the presidency. They were initially lifted in March.
