In case your Best Graphics Card for Use with Windows is a Nvidia. No problem - we have. Examination of protective factors in epilepsy. Epilepsy and its related comorbidities including intellectual disability can have profound impacts on a person's educational and vocational success. It is essential that school personnel are aware of protective factors that contribute to success and can guide teachers and parents in planning activities that are beneficial. This article discusses protective factors within the context of epilepsy and highlights the importance of enhancing them to increase success in education and employment. In addition, recommendations and concrete steps that may be taken to affect the success of a person with epilepsy are proposed.

Central tegmental nucleus: a transmitter of the medullary dorsal horn in the cat. Experiments were performed to test the hypothesis that the central tegmental nucleus (CTG) is a transmitter in the medullary dorsal horn (MDH) in the cat. Microiontophoretic injections of the excitatory amino acid, N-methyl-D-aspartate (NMDA) in the MDH resulted in antidromic excitation (excitatory postsynaptic potential) in the CTG, indicating that the CTG is in direct synaptic connection with the MDH. Excitatory postsynaptic potentials were also elicited by microiontophoretic applications of alpha-amino-3-hydroxy-5-methyl-4-isoxazolepropionic acid (AMPA) in the intermediate nucleus of the superficial laminae of the cervical and lumbar enlargements. The probability of occurrence of AMPA-induced excitatory postsynaptic potentials in the CTG was approximately five times greater than in the intermediate nucleus. The coexistence of AMPA-induced excitatory postsynaptic potentials and antidromic responses (in the CTG) to electrical stimulation in the CTG indicated that AMPA receptors are present on the CTG neurons and their membrane potential can be depolarized by an AMPA-like excitatory amino acid. Bilateral microinjections of the protein synthesis inhibitor, anisomycin into the CTG also resulted in a significant reduction in AMPA-induced excitatory postsynaptic potentials in the CTG. Local application of bicuculline methiodide (BiC), a GABAB receptor antagonist, in the MDH suppressed AMPA-induced excitatory postsynaptic potentials in the CTG.
