I am in need of some parts. First of all the ballast and starter motor. I need to see if I can remove the rear wheels and put them in the front and see what I need to get. It's real nice looking equipment and should be a lot of fun to put on and enjoy. Any one have any suggestions for getting the front wheels to stay put? I have gotten the rear to stay put but I am having a problem with the front. Nah, I don't want to work so I am just going to do what I was planning to do to begin with with my Yamaha 0T mower; cut the bag off of it, put it in my cart, and do it on the way home from work. I would never put the rear wheels up front! That's the quickest way to get it all over the lawn.
