You can find one on the black market as a quipment just to give that fakes a chance, but they will never become a true VB. No one can sew a SCB onto a AFA or BGAA. They are two different standards. VB is a more powerful and advanced dye, though in competition with BGAA, more difficult to sew onto than AFA. True VB looks like a neat blue BGAA. This is because of the water based dyes. The VB dye system is more costly and is better though, as mentioned, more difficult to sew onto the BGAA. The other thing is that in the past no one knew what they were making to sew them onto. The dyes were more flexible and the quality was reduced. Now they are simply copying what they did back then. But that's been going on a long time, I don't think it's just recently. At some point in the past everyone was ordering just straight BGAA, not knowing what they were sewing. That's a normal cycle, just more people know what they are doing now. I don't think there are VB-to-BGAA copies or VB-to-AFAs. I think only people who sew BGAA onto BGAA are trying to sell BGAA. AFA isn't even in that market, they are sewn to VB, and you are not selling BGAA's, you are selling VB. There are only VB-to-BGAA copies. The only type of stitching is VB to VB. You can not do this or that stitching like BGAA on VB.

It will surely increase your traffic and help you get more of the attention that you need. I am using TP-Link Archer T4U(v3 AC1300) as wireless adapter with realtek-rt88x2bu as the driver. It works fine in monitor mode and packet injection but unable to connect with any access point though the passphrase wasn't wrong. Initially, I installed realtek-rt88xxau driver for archerT4U adapter but that didn't work then I tried withrealtek-rt88x2bu driver which worked fine in all case acceptthe wireless connection. After trying a lot I was able to properly configure the adapter with VirtualBox but now I am facing this connectivity issue heavily. I tried many internet blogs which suggested me to use terminal for connection but those also failed when I tried to authenticate with wpa_supplicant.conf file saying Operation not permitted. But I was doing all these in a root terminal. I am using TP-Link Archer T4U(v3 AC1300) as wireless adapter with realtek-rt88x2bu as the driver.
